JUDGE RUMMY in "HIS LAST LEGS."

Silk Hat Harry has a shop for painting stockings on women's legs, and he gives Judge Rummy the job of artist. The first customer is a one-toothed old maid, who leaves with the four suits of a pack of cards painted on. The second causes Rummy to ponder, and he finally paints a mouse that is so real that the office cat starts after it.

The mouse runs around the room and up under Rummy's clothes with the cat after him. At the end of the mixup, the cat pulls the mouse out but cannot hold him and chases him out of the room.

At this time, Mrs Rummy pays a visit to the shop, and when Rummy sees her legs come through the screen, he decides that the most appropriate artistic work will be a ham. When the work is finished, she lifts the curtain. Needless to say, she does not care for the design, nor does she waste any time before punishing the designer.

LAMPOONS

A series of clever sayings, gibes, jests, and jokes, clipped from the press of the world, about twelve in all.
